THURSDAY, MARCH 23rd, 1922 VINDICATING THE GORILLA

Although the monkey tribe is more akin to man than any other in the animal kingdom, it appears that about the noblest variety of that tribe, the gorilla, we have known not much more than about some of the deep sea fish. That the gorilla is one of the most ferocious of monsters, that it is a man eater and will attack without being attacked are beliefs deep seated in the popular mind. But Dr. Carl E. Akeley, an American scientist, who has returned recently from Africa, where he made a special study of gorillas, declares that these ideas are all wrong. The gorilla is not ferocious. It is timid. It is not a flesh eater. It lives on fruit and grain. It is playful, and Dr. Akeley reports on one occasion that he saw four or five of them romping like children in the opening in the woods. At the click of the camera they fled in terror. The natives in the gorilla country report that they seldom see one of these animals which are too timid to emerge from the forest, but they give the animals credit for being unusually respectable members of the forest community. The male gorilla is said to be a faithful mate. When he goes out for a walk he usually takes the female and the family with him. On their return he puts them to sleep in a nest in the trees and then takes up his position on the ground to protect them. He is indignant if he is kept away and when they meet in combat one or the other does not come forth alive.

But popular ideas concerning the gorilla have not exaggerated his size in his innate formidableness. One shot by the American scientist weighed 360 pounds, was five and a half feet in height and measured thirty inches around the chest. A photograph of this monster's back compared with the back of a native makes the full grown man appear like a baby in comparison. The fact that a gorilla could easily snatch up a man and carry him to his nest in a tree has probably given rise to the idea that the gorilla is a blood-thirsty, but because of his destructiveness to their crops Dr. Akeley brought back the skins of five large gorillas which he shot for the American Museum of Natural History. He says the gorilla offers little sport for the hunter, and if taken soon will be docile, and, like the chimpanzee, will show an ability and also an inclination to learn from his keeper.

Some day the world may no longer be in doubt as to the distinguished individual who actually discovered America. Certainly Columbus never set foot on the mainland, and probably thought he was previously close to Far Cathay, while the hemisphere is named after an Italian camparist, Amerigo Vesputi. But the Viking voyagers are alleged to have preceded both men, antedating their discovery by centuries. Reliable records confirming this contention are wanting. Now come the French men's claim of priority for the Jean Cousin, who sailed into the Americas in 1492, and in 1493, he sailed to the Cape of Good Hope. As Columbus did not sail till four years later, it is not surprising that he apparently has to look to their laurels if his special distinction is to endure. But there is a slight change for the Genoa sailor after all. Thanks to the English who harboured Columbus, the English town, Drogheda, in 1493, the records of Cousin's achievement were destroyed. The Italians, it is said, are really grateful for the little help which the English appear to have unconsciously rendered them.

About two hundred and fifty descendants of John Budd of Philadelphia, who held a claim to the title for nearly all the land claimed by Atlantic City. They claim that the land was originally given to John Budd in a grant from Queen Anne. This group of people is anxious to say the least, and while there is small chance of its obtaining the city, the recognition of the group, which is said to be a very ancient group, it brings in many other possibilities. Some Indian descendants might pop up and state that their ancestors had been defrauded when Manhattan was purchased and offer to return the sixty guineas which Peter Manuik gave for the island if his land be returned to him.

Paris, as always, is the starting point for all queer theories. The latest one is the assertion of Professor Courcier, that when man walks on his two feet he's doing a thing that is the result of ignorance. Man was by nature designed to be a quadruped, declares the Professor. Well, any man who has crawled about looking for a golf ball or a collar button for ten minutes, will say that the Professor is not far from the mark. The Professor's mistake, as he says, is that he has made an anthropic mistake.

JACK AND JILL
(After the manner of A. E. Housman)
Oh, it was breezy weather
Along Pennadock Hill,
When they set out to play,
Climb lightfoot Jack and Jill.
And if the way was dusty,
Their careless hearts were
By the way was dusty,
For he was little and lithe,
And lusty she, and lusty,
And it was breezy weather
When they that played the game
Came down the hill together—
But it was not the same!
For Joy demands a martyr
To rise, then turn down;
I think she broke her garter—
I know he broke her crown!
—Tom Robinson in Cleveland Plaindealer.

A minor operation has been performed on George Carpenter. If he needs a major operation he will probably summon old Doc Dempsey.

S. M. Irrigation Board Busy

The matter which the trustee board has on hand at the present time is the preparing of the estimates of cost for this project, but there is some discrepancy between the actual estimates and the amount of the guarantee as provided by the provincial legislature. The estimate must be brought into line with the guarantee, but as soon as this is accomplished, the by-law providing for the raising of money will be submitted to the land voters at the earliest possible moment.

U. F. A. Activities

On Thursday last Mr. Stephen Linn, of Puchow Creek, U.F.A. director for the Federal riding of Macleod, was in town and held a meeting with representatives from the various localities throughout this provincial riding. His object was to form a district association, which would act as a nucleus for the U.F.A. movement in the district. The U.F.A. movement is a very ancient one, and the business brought before them, is too much in detail. In regard to the U.F.A. movement, the influence of such a district association will be much greater than that of the various localities. The work of such an organization would include matters both of a political and social nature, and it was finally decided to call together the Provincial Political Association which has already been formed, and to possibly of dissolving the said association and merging its duties with those of the U.F.A. movement to form. After some informal discussion the meeting adjourned.

Allenfields News

The members of the U.F.A. district of Allenfields, held their social and dance in the school house on the night of St. Patrick's Day. A lively band of music, and a very good supper, made the evening's entertainment, which is said to have been the best ever held in that section of the district. The music for the occasion was supplied by the celebrated Allenfields orchestra. An interesting feature of the evening was a raffle for prizes, the proceeds of which were donated to the U.F.A. movement. These collections resulted altogether $20.00, many of them being sold for as much as $5.00 each. As the money was to be spent when refreshments were served later on, the many good looking bachelors present, but eagerly on every pie put up, determined to be the possessor of at least one of these.

Mr. E. B. Beldner acted as emcee, and as auctioneer, each pie offered being declared superior to the one last offered, so willingly, so willingly, the social the great success it undoubtedly was are hereby thanked most justly and publicly for the very efficient service they rendered on the occasion. Without the ladies, who, as Mr. Beldner said, "what the 'helpless' male accomplish when pies hang in the balance. Altogether the sum of about $20.00 was 'real' sold from the evening's entertainment, and the new and for some time past being carried on so energetically in the district, the money is much needed in order to meet the many requests for help which are still being received. An Educational Entertainment

On the evening of Thursday, March 16, a meeting was held in the Town Hall which was well attended by townspeople and farmers from the surrounding district. Moving pictures were shown on a screen illustrating the methods of grain handling as followed by the United Grain Growers of Western Canada. These illustrations included scenes from the growing and cutting of wheat on the western farms to the movement of the grain through the local and terminal elevators and the loading to the lake vessels until it reaches the elevators at Montreal harbor. These scenes were certainly very impressive and conveyed a splendid idea of the methods of handling and grading grain followed by this company. The thirty-six thousand shareholders of this company scattered throughout western Canada have each their voice and vote in the direction of the company's business, and the election of suitable officers for the conduct of its business, and the pattern of this great concern have every reason to feel that their grain is being handled in their interests. The company is also among the greatest dealers and exporters of the stock in Canada and are also engaged extensively in the handling of wheat, barley and other goods required by the farming element.

CLOSING EXERCISES OF THE CLAREMOUTH SCHOOL

On the evening of Friday, March 21, commencing at 8:15 p.m., the Annual Closing Exercises of the School of Claremouth, Ontario, were held. In addition to the awarding of diplomas, and contribution by local talent an address was given by Dr. A. M. Scott, Superintendent of Calgary Schools. Dancing and supper will complete the evening's program. The staff and students will be glad to welcome as many friends of the school as can conveniently attend.

Rev. G. D. Armstrong was billed to preach at Rathwell last evening, but the heavy wind blowing at the time the Rev. gentleman undertook to keep his appointment, and was not to be, his car becoming clogged with sand and finally coming to a standstill in a sand drift, and it was one of the worst he has ever had to make during a rather lengthy period of residence in this country.

A farmer friend came in recently with the unweelcome news that grasshoppers in large numbers have been noticed during the last few warm days, and was all but sure that it, and later, from similar reports. The news that so many locusts are in evidence at this very early date is disquieting to say the least, but farmer friends having retained less last seasons from the insects of this seasons mounting up well into six figures.

Formers will be interested in knowing that the price of farmholdings here taken a big drop since last season. Four years ago, or since the first major appearance in this part, the drug, mixed with water, has been used as a killing agent in the garden. When the grasshopper is sprinkled with a certain length of time before being sown. The killing, if properly done, destroys the small germ which otherwise would increase in the soil and affect the growing plants, sometimes lowering the grade of the wheat sufficiently to cause a serious loss to the farmer.

George Eckmire, who is farming near Foremost, arrived here Tuesday evening, and is now in the neighborhood. Mr. Eckmire, who has spent some days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Clarke of Rathwell, will likely accompany her husband upon his return. Mr. Eckmire reports having had considerable snow in his part of the country during the spring of 1916. The crops have been very good considering everything, and farmers there find themselves in much better shape financially than do those in other parts of the country. When Mr. Eckmire left home his conveyance was a sleigh and the sleighing was good.

One of the most remarkable features of the freight rate controversy that is exciting so much interest at the present time, is the claim of the C.P. R., that, irrespective of all other conditions, the freight and passenger rates fixed by the railway commission must be "high enough to permit the company to earn sufficient profits to pay the usual dividend of 10 per cent. on its capital stock, and in addition, something left over by way of surplus. The employees of the C. P. R., and practically everyone else who has to work for a living, have had to accept a reduction of wages. Business generally throughout the country has experienced a reduction of profits.

The farmer, who supply a very large proportion of the earnings of the railways, has for the past year been working for nothing and the railways have been able to pay out of the treasury of the company, which for 1920 amounted to $7,493,333—Grain Growers' Guide.

It would be interesting to know just how many of our butcher friends were the young lady at Winona, Ontario, who made known her wishes to purchase a cow. At length it was decided that a cow was to be purchased. The cow was shipped to a large city where it remained in cold storage for several years. At length it emerged therefrom and was given to a young man in a city bearing down for his breakfast. Thinking it a freshly written message (the taste of the egg should have convinced him otherwise) he wrote to the address mentioned. But it turned out the young man had become a blanching matron and the mother of a large family of small children. And right there what appeared to be a promising romance was ruthlessly snipped in the bud. Now, the question that was in the minds of Rathwell is: "Was the message sent to the address mentioned in 1912 or as far back as 1907?" This suggestion is not thrown out as a wet blanket for any means. Take a chance boys, take a chance!

"Says the Shoe to the Stocking: 'I'll rub a hole in you.' Says the Stocking to the Shoe: 'I'll be darned if you do.'"

How many girls take a pride in mending hosiery. They may do it, but it is put off till later like a dose of salts. When they have a hole in the hose caused by a bad fitting shoe and a fracture appears they don't use the hose used in the above quotation. You'll be darned. I'll fix you. Now darning should be a pleasure. You have no doubt heard your mother or some one else uttering something about what a beautiful darning her mother was. What is wanted is to make mending easy or stockings a pleasure. Let a mother have one day each week, make a little piece of it, lay in a few candies, nuts and fruit; then bring out the accumulation of holes with holes, giving to the different ages cotton, wool or silk. The children would look forward to this weekly mending. Some specimens of darning we have all seen could hardly be distinguished from the original fabric. It is bad policy for us to advise mending, as we have to sell hosiery. Our advice should be don't mend, when the hole gets too big buy another pair. Now if our Agricultural Fairs would offer prizes for children from 10 to 15 years of age for the best darned stocking, that would be making of the future wife and mother. Then why should not these fairs give a prize for the best darned doll, the girl dries it from top to toe. This would save in future years mending and independence of the girl, who could do her own, then, later on, her children's darning. Or give prize for the best darned hat with invitations for the best samples of knitting. Give those prizes instead of impossible fancy work or immature drawings and paintings that many have no gift for. Lots of money prizes are given away that do not train up the western girl in the future life of a mother with children, and father working for small wages.

A cold wave set in from the north on Tuesday night following a period of warm, spring-like weather. About an inch of snow fell with it but later, north, in the vicinity of Calgary, the storm was greater in its severity, a depth of nearly five inches of the 'ben' 'luff' being reported. The present winter failed to produce unusual weather conditions and the snowfall has been unusually light. Old timers claim that a winter during which there is light snowfall is almost sure to be followed by a growing season.

An Irishman beating the drum in an Orange procession was asked by a canny Scotchman why he had to remove his coat when playing that instrument. The Irishman answered the question by asking another, which he said to be the inevitable custom of all Irishmen. It is stated that the reindeer brought into the far north of Canada from Norway to provide food for shipwrecked crews of the Arctic vessels, have increased in number very considerably, and are found to be admirably suited for that far northern task. It is predicted that in twenty years or less reindeer meat will be within reach of all and at a more reasonable price than the range beef of today.

In spite of the threatening weather on Friday last, St. Patrick's Day, the Catholic Ladies held a sale of work and serving of tea, in the town hall, for the benefit of the Red Cross. People took advantage of it and the good articles for sale and the tea that was served kept the ladies busy. In the evening a dance was held and the floor space was fully occupied all the time, during which Ryan's Orchestra was in attendance, and the encores which were demanded and freely given proved that all had a pleasant evening.
